K. Believed To Be In Bad Spot

BERLIN (UPI) — Western officials believe Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev has painted himself into a corner in the Berlin dispute.

For almost four years, Khrushchev has failed in his attempts to force the Allies to abandon the city.

It was on Nov. 27, 1958, that Khrushchev sent notes to the United States, Britain, and France demanding the withdrawal of the Allied garrisons from West Berlin and its conversion into a "free, demilitarized city." The Allies are still here, and in some ways the Western position is believed stronger than ever.

It has become obvious to Western officials here—and probably to the Russians themselves—that nothing short of a war would force the west to abandon Berlin. And there is no thought here that Khrushchev wants a war or a brink of war crisis, particularly since he has seen the firm American response on Cuba.

Khrushchev's corner position does not mean that the Soviets have given up seeking a Berlin settlement on their terms or have abandoned their periodic harassing actions against the city's access routes.

The latest such harassment occurred Wednesday when Soviet guards held up a small U. S. Army convoy for one hour and 15 minutes at the Berlin end of the 10-mile highway to West Germany. It was the third such delay this month, and it appeared part of a Soviet plan to impose new control procedures on Allied military movements through East Germany.

The Russians delayed the seven trucks and 14 soldiers because they claimed the Americans should have given advance notice of the convoy's movement. The convoy commander stood fast on the American position that such notification is not necessary under four-power agreements permitting the Allies access to Berlin.

The Soviets advanced the same arguments Nov. 2 and Nov. 9 when they staged similar delays, and they received the same answers.

Local Tax Bite For $3,324,000; Will It Be Cut?

(Special to the Ledger & Times)
NEW YORK, Nov. 12 — Can residents of Calloway County count on a tax cut in 1963? Or have the prospects for such a cut been dimmed by recent international events?

Local residents, because of their income levels, have been paying huge personal taxes. Their payments, in the past fiscal year, came to approximately $3,324,000, according to an unofficial estimate based on Treasury Department figures.

Along with other taxpayers throughout the country, they have been looking forward to a reduction next year.

Current opinion is that some cut will be proposed by the Administration. How large it will be will depend on the state of the economy and the size of the 1964 budget.

Commerce Secretary Luther Hodges has come out for a slash in taxes right after the first of the year, without waiting for a broad tax reform bill, which might take a long time.

Many Congressmen have been surprised by the attitude of their constituents on the subject. They are finding that the homelike, rural feel that it would be irresponsible to do this if it meant adding to the national deficit and debt.

They want any adjustment to be accompanied by a cut in Federal spending for non-defense purposes.

Of the $3,324,000 in individual income taxes paid by Calloway County residents in the year, over $1,363,000 is being used for domestic spending and the rest for national defense. This is based on a study just released by the Tax Foundation.

The domestic spending covers benefits for agriculture, commerce, veterans, education, health and welfare, labor, space research, housing and the like. The current bill for these items is $26 billion, 126 percent higher than it was 8 years ago.

Defense costs, by contrast, have gone up only 14 percent in the 8 years, says the Tax Foundation.

Because of our deficit spending, year after year, the national debt has grown to more than $296 billion, it notes.

Calloway County's share of this debt, which averages $1,916 for every man, woman and child in the county, amounts to $34,098,000.

Janet's godfather, Sir Hugo Const, played by Don Lesley, senior, Paducah, is a newspaper magazine magnate, who in his youth had covered the trial; upon meeting Mrs. Smith once again he is convinced of her guilt and sets out to prove it.

on the Cuban situation including the question of U.S. demands that the IL28 jet bombers be withdrawn from the island.

Press secretary Pierre Salinger made this comment when asked about reports of a new exchange of letters between President Kennedy and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

"There is continuing communication between Washington and Moscow," he said. "I don't want to identify any particular letter." Salinger made his comments amid reports that Kennedy was somewhat optimistic that his stern warnings to Moscow would lead to early removal of the Soviet bombers from Cuba.

He was understood to have sent word to Khrushchev within the past 48 hours that the plane issue could not be permitted to drag on indefinitely.

Kennedy also is said to have told the Soviet leader that until Russia agreed to remove the approximately 30 bombers capable of carrying nuclear weapons, there could be no consideration of easing the American quarantine against the American quarantine against giving any pledge against a U.S. invasion of Cuba.

Salinger said that "certainly" the issue of the IL28s had been the subject of some of the recent communications between the United States and Russia.

There have been reports that Khrushchev has suggested a series of action which should be taken before actual removal of the IL28 bombers from Cuba. They reportedly call for the United States to first meet Cuban and Russian demands for a lifting of the blockade.

Salinger declined to be specific, however, on the contact between Washington and Moscow.

He also declined to comment on a Radio Moscow report that the United Nations between the United States and the Soviet Union

Paul Gargus Overturns On Lake Highway

An automobile accident occurred last night about 11 o'clock in the Leebetter bottom on Highway 94 east.

The one car crash involved a 1963 Ford Fairlane driven by Paul Gargus of the Benton Road. Gargus' automobile, which was approaching Murray, left the road on the left side, re-crossed the highway and overturned in a shallow ditch.

A motorist who said he was following the Gargus car reported the accident to the Sheriff's office. However a group of Murray men returning from a trip was apparently the first to stop and lend assistance.

Gargus was pulled from the wreckage by the men and brought to the Murray Hospital for treatment. He was not believed to have been seriously injured in the accident.

The men reported they found the automobile upside down with the lights still on but the engine was not running. The doors were shut tightly and no glasses were broken. Gargus may have been partially overcome by very strong gas fumes in the car and had apparently made no effort to free himself.

The victim, alone at the time except for a pet dog, was stretched full length on the roof of the auto with the frightened animal at his side.

He immediately recognized his friends and was able to help free himself through a rear door.

Gargus stated that a car turned from a side road in front of him causing him to lose control of his automobile.

The accident was investigated by Deputy Sheriff Taylor Gooch.

Florida Nosed Out Of Top Grid Spot

NEW YORK (AP) — With only two weeks remaining before the crowning of the national champion, Southern Mississippi Wednesday replaced Florida A&M as the No. 1 small college football team in the United Press International board of coaches ratings.

The Southerners, who missed point a week ago, drew the first-place votes of 15 coaches this week, with Florida A&M, which led the ratings every week of the season, was picked for the top spot by 14 coaches. A total of 35 coaches, five from each of the nation's seven geographical regions, comprise the UPI rating board.

In points, which are distributed on a basis of 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 for votes from first through 10th places, Southern Mississippi had a total of 295 to Florida A&M's 281.

Southern Mississippi has won eight of nine games while Florida A&M is unbeaten through seven games.

Central Oklahoma, unbeaten in eight games, held onto third place while Lenoir-Rhyne remained fourth. Northern Illinois, which completed its season with a 7-1 record and accepted a bid to the Mineral Bowl, held onto fifth.

Fresno State (6-2) remained sixth and Southeastern Louisiana (6-1) remained seventh.

Delaware (6-2) advanced from ninth to eighth and Wittenberg (8-0) and Texas A&I (8-0-1) moved into the top 10 for the first time this season.

TOPPERS TOP TONY.... Five Western players converge on Racer quarterback Tony Fioravanti and stop him at the line of scrimmage for no gain. Western players are Barry Poole (70), Jim Burt (30), and three unidentified Hilltoppers. Western went on to stop Murray, 16-15.

Morehead end Mike Brown wound up with a punting average of 39.3, but Middle Tennessee quarterback Bob Kerr is next at 37.2, and Kerr has one game in which to improve his final average.

Statistical leaders last weekend were Chittum, who rushed for 111 yards, and Middle Tennessee quarterback Teddy Morris, who passed for 208. A late-season freshman sensation, Morris jumped from 12th to sixth in total offense.

Team leaders are Middle Tennessee in offense with 269.4 yards per start, and Eastern Kentucky on defense with a 204.6 mark.

Morehead, East Tennessee and Eastern Kentucky are assured of a share of the 1962 team championship since all posted 4-2 won-lost marks. Middle Tennessee can make it a four-way tie atop the seven-team loop by beating Tennessee Tech. Saturday's games saw Morehead topple Eastern Kentucky 20-12 while East Tennessee dumped Middle Tennessee by the same score. Western Kentucky nipped Murray 16-15 in the other loop test. Tennessee Tech flipped highly regarded Arkansas State 20-12.

Fioravanti Leads In O. V. C. Passing

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Tony Fioravanti, Jimmy Chittum, Jimmy Baker, Gary Foltz and Mike Brown are on the verge of clinching individual statistical titles for the 1962 Ohio Valley Conference football season.

All have completed play atop one or more statistical divisions but the Middle Tennessee-Tennessee Tech game on Thanksgiving Day could alter the standings. However, it would take a herculean effort in the final game to dislodge one of the leaders.

Statistical leaders are decided on the basis of O. V. C. games only. Passing and total offense, East Tennessee quarterback Jimmy Baker, who edged Fioravanti in passing and total offense last year, has a firm grip on scoring leadership with 48 points.

Eastern Kentucky's Jimmy Chittum, who won all-O. V. C. honors at a halfback post last fall, has sewed up the rushing crown with 144 yards in 74 trips.

Murray and Gary Foltz owns a 17-16 edge over Western Kentucky's both have completed play within the league.

in an non-league tilt.

Tech's win was the 13th this season by an O. V. C. club at the expense of an outsider. The seven O. V. C. teams have dropped seven non-loop tests. Austin Peay won't be eligible to compete for the title until next year.

The field goal trend continues in the O. V. C. Western Kentucky's Ed Crum booted his third of the season last week to boost the loop's 1962 total to 32. Only six were kicked last year. Crum has the "longie" of the season, a 40-yarder, but East Tennessee's Baker leads all with four three-pointers.

O. V. C. teams have combined to score 121 touchdowns this season with 44 coming on pass plays (interceptions excluded). In 1961, 32 of 148 t. d.'s came by air. In 1960, only 34 of 133 six-pointers were of the aerial kind. Middle Tennessee and Western Kentucky have tallied eight touchdowns each through the air but East Tennessee leads with nine.

The regular fall meeting of the Ohio Valley Conference will be held at 9 a. m. (E. S. T.), Sunday, Nov. 18, at the Kentucky Hotel in Louisville, Ky.

O. V. C. publicists will meet at the same hour.

Proposals to be discussed at the conference's business meeting include:

1. The adoption of a letter of intent within the league and consideration of possible affiliation with other conferences regarding regional or sectional letters of intent.

2. Holding the annual golf tournament on a neutral course, possibly at Fort Knox.

3. Extension of grant-in-aids to spring sports.

4. Inclusion of a rifle team in the team sports approved by the loop, and organization of a tournament to determine the conference champion.

5. Renewed discussion of a move to employ a commissioner.

Announcing the agenda was secretary-treasurer Hooper E. H. Tennessee Tech athletic director East Tennessee Football Coach S. Wood is scheduled to preside as current president of the league.

Robert G. Cochran, Western Kentucky's public relations director, is to preside over the meeting of publicity directors. He was named chairman at a recent organizational meeting.

THEY'VE ALWAYS BEEN TOUGH BUT NEVER STRONGER THAN NOW!

You can be sure that new engines, frames, suspensions that licked Mexico's Baja Run will work for you long, faithfully and at traditionally low Chevrolet cost.

A Chevrolet truck has always been a sound investment because of its quality construction. This is what makes it give you an honest day's work every day at very low cost and—when you are finished with it—return more resale money to your happy pocket.

This year stronger frames, engines that can pull more, and practically tailor-made suspension systems make Chevrolet trucks a better buy than ever. If you're in the market now, we'd welcome the chance to tell you about, and let you drive, the new trucks. Just give us a call.

Kennedy ...

are ranging to subjects beyond Cuba.

Administration officials said there were indications that Khrushchev was convinced of the President's firmness on the bomber removal but that as of early today, no definite assurances had been received from the Soviet premier on the issue.

No Deadline Given

According to government sources, Kennedy did not give Khrushchev any specific deadline for pulling out the bombers but made it clear the United States would not permit the Kremlin to stall too long before firmer measures were taken.

Implicit in the U.S. warning, although not actually put in the form of a threat, was the intention to tighten the blockade unless the issue is resolved. Officials said one step would be cutting off petroleum supplies to the Castro regime.

Direct communications between Washington and Moscow were under taken to reinforce the position being taken by U.N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson in his talks in New York with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vassiliy Kuznetsov, officials said.

Diplomatic sources said Kennedy told West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer during their talks here Wednesday on the Cuban situation that he was hopeful Khrushchev soon would agree to take the bombers out of Cuba but had no firm assurance as yet.

IT'S FOR THE BIRDS—A Washington newsman protects his ears as a recording of a startling in distress blares from a speaker (center of bottom limb of tree at left). The method is being used to keep starlings away from the white walls and columns of the Executive Mansion. It was necessary to get a recorded complaint of a distressed District of Columbia starling because out-of-town visitors have a different accent, says White House press secretary Pierre Salinger.

U. S. ON PATROL OFF CUBA—Enforcing the American quarantine of Cuba, a U. S. helicopter observes a Soviet submarine (top) operating in Cuban waters, and the U. S. destroyer escort, Peterson patrols off Cuba (background).

This also was the response early today from government sources when asked about a report that Kennedy had received a message from Khrushchev definitely promising to pull out the IL28's.

Officials said the Russians now admit that the bombers are still under their control and have not, as Cuban authorities claim, already been transferred to Fidel Castro's regime.

These officials indicated that there had been reassurances on this point in Khrushchev's replies to the White House, along with promises that the bombers would not be put into operation while negotiations were being held. Officials said U.S. air reconnaissance showed that a number of the bombers were still in their crates and none had yet been fully assembled to the point where it quickly could become operational.

MONEY STOLEN—This is part of the rare coin collection stolen from the Truman Library in Independence, Mo. Looking at the coins prior to the burglary are former President Harry Truman (right) and John W. Snyder, Truman's Treasury secretary, who lent the collection to the library. The coins were minted during administration of 35 presidents. Snyder said they were worth around $30,000 if sold individually. Truman put a value "way over $100,000" on the coins as a collection.

BOOK REVIEW:

Blurb on Cover Better Than Book

Reviewed by Ernest Vaughn
"This Fair Eden" relates how a young boy and girl, after a horrible storm sinks their ship, find themselves alone on a raft under the hot tropical sun, surrounded by the blue water of the Pacific. Eventually, when it appears that all hope is gone, Channing and Janice are cast upon a small island, which they name "this fair Eden."
After some time passes, the two build a home for themselves and discover they are in love with each other. Next, of course, comes an addition to the family in the person of a son, Little Chan. Life on the tropical paradise is fine until the island's volcano erupts in all its horrible fury. The volcanic eruption changes the lives of Channing and Janice.
Mr. Downes, in his first book, has used a somewhat overworked theme. It is unfortunate that his writing was wasted on this book.
The "blurb" of the book states, "Above all, This Fair Eden is a book which every Christian will want to own." Why anyone would want to own it is a mystery to this reviewer. There is nothing profound contained in the book whatsoever.
It is this reviewer's opinion that the person who wrote the "blurb" for the book was a much better writer than Mr. Downes.

President Betancourt

IF VENEZUELA'S President Romulo Betancourt continues to survive street fighting, barracks revolts, bombings and assassination attempts till the end of his five-year term at end of 1963, he will be the first freely-elected president in the nation's century and a half of independence to complete a term. Recent Communist sabotage—oil field bombings—continue to make his situation precarious, however. Betancourt, 54, at first was pro-Castro, but changed his mind when the Cuban dictator's true Red colors were shown. Betancourt's goal now is to finish his term and see free elections for his successor.

Homecoming 1962: Varied and Exciting

Homecoming 1962 got under way early Saturday morning with various breakfasts and the Homecoming parade heading the day's agenda.

Twenty-one floats were entered in the parade which was led by the "Marching Thoroughbreds." Sigma Sigma Sigma won top honors with "Murray Wears the Victory Laurels." The second place prize was taken by Tau Kappa Epsilon with a huge, tissue-stuffed Trojan horse bearing the slogan, "It Worked at Troy."

High-School Bands

Eight high-school bands participated in the parade: Crittenden County, Lone Oak, Fulton County, North Marshall, Dawson Springs, Murray High, College High, and Calloway County.

Other features of the parade were: Wendi the Magician, the president's car, the Board of Reg. Pershing Rifles "Sweetheart" and attendants, Sigma Chi "Sweetheart," the Rangers, and Pershing Rifles.

Capacity Crowd

Cutlin Stadium was packed beyond capacity with students, alumni, and townspeople for Murray State's 30th Homecoming. Mums and soft drinks were in abundance at Saturday's game as MSC played arch-rival, Western State College.

The pre-game show began with the presentation of the winning floats in the morning parade.

The highlight of Homecoming was the crowning of "Football Queen" Elizabeth Bivins, junior, Mt. Carmel, Ill. He attendants were Marcia Chumler, junior, Mayfield; and Henrietta Davis, sophomore, Grayville, Ill.

Miss Bivins was crowned by Mr. Frank A. Stubblefield, Congressman from the first district.

Color Guard

The Pershing Rifles color guard marched onto the field and stood at attention with the crowd as the band played the national anthem.

The stands were packed, and every available inch was occupied. Many stood throughout the entire game; others sat on the ground.

Prior to the game, a "knight in shining armor" on a white horse galloped around the field bearing the effigy of a Western player on a lance. The dummy was stacked before the Western fans during the game.

Half-Time Show

The half-time show concluded the "Marching Thoroughbreds" season. The "rapsody in blue and gold" marched onto the field led by the twinkling twirlers and Drum Major Jack Garner senior, Louisville.

At the beginning of the show Garner, senior, Louisville, was presented a baton in recognition of his contributions to MSC and the band during his four years here. The presentation was made by Richard Farrell, fine arts department head.

Gardner is president of Phi Mu Alpha, music fraternity, a member of the A Cappella Choir, orchestra, brass choir, and wood wind quintet. He has directed the "Men of Note" dance band and was director for the 1962 "Campus Lights."

Salute to Alumni

The theme of the half-time program was a salute to the alumni. The purpose was to fill the alumni in on the changes at MSC.

The band was in the formation of a large "M," as the alumni were reminded of the array of new buildings erected since 1958, the new look of 15th Street, the fact that freshmen are not allowed to have cars on campus, and Centrex.

"There's a chicken 'a every pot and a telephone for every chick this year at MSC," said the announcer. "Gone forever are the days when little Miss Co-ed must run from one end of the dorm to the other dripping wet dragging her towel behind her." The band then played "Hello My Baby."

Auld Lang Syne

Between formations the band played "Auld Lang Syne." It was pointed out that the new dances such as the "Twist" or the "Fly" mean little to the older alumni. In their honor the band played "Muskrat Ramble" while doing a precision dance routine.

The next formation was an old photograph and the band played "Music Goes Round and Round." The band next formed two stereo

It looks like tragedy strikes when we least expect it. Our sympathy goes to all who lost loved ones especially to the Perry family who lost their son and grandson last week.

Well the election is over. Some lost and some won but that is expected.

speakers and played "Me and My Shadow."

To conclude the program, the "Marching Thoroughbreds" formed a large "M" and, as the spectators stood, accompanied Mr. Robert Ebar, music division fine arts department, as he sang the Murray State College Alma Mater.

Defeat for MSC

"In the heart of Jackson's Purchase, neath the sun's warm glow" MSC was defeated in its Homecoming game by one point in the last minutes of the game.

The usual props were present at the game, the Alpha Tau Omega cannon, the Confederate flag, the Pike's and Tau Kappa Epsilon bells, and the Pi Kappa Alpha "old grey mare."

The days festivities were continued after the game with an alumni barbecue in the ballroom of the SUB. According to Mr. M. O. Wraether, executive secretary of the alumni association, there were about 300 people in attendance.

Mental Health In Kentucky Today

By Harold L. McPheeters M.D.
Commissioner
Kentucky Department of Mental Health

We are often asked what is the relationship between mental health and religion.

In actuality each man has some spiritual relationship to God. This is a personal kind of relationship and is different for each person. Most people develop this relationship through a church. The form of worship and the individual beliefs may vary, but man's relationship to God helps him find meaning in his existence now and after death.

Since religious life is a part of every man's existence, it is important that we recognize it as also part of good mental health. Thus, contrary to what people have sometimes mistakenly thought, religion and psychiatry are not in opposition to each other.

Both religion and mental health are concerned with the "whole" person, not just a part. Both consider love as the highest interpersonal value; both are concerned with reducing suffering and anxiety as well as supporting the person in such experiences. Many psychiatrists are deeply religious and count heavily upon religious resources in helping their patient. A few clergymen are also psychiatrists, and many clergymen suggest to their members that they get help from psychiatric resources.

In addition to "having" a relationship with his God, a mentally healthy person should have a solid and realistic "understanding" of this relationship.

Being religious does not mean that a person will be spared all tragedies or heartbreaks, and obviously a devout person may get sick physically and emotionally. A religious person, however, will have spiritual strengths and faith to help him when there are such occasions.

A mentally healthy person realizes that he must not use God or his church simply to justify what he wants to do. This often happens with emotionally-disturbed people.

An extreme example would be a man who believes that God wants him to destroy certain individuals whom he personally dislikes. Similarly, groups sometimes may persecute other groups in the name of their church or their God.

A mentally healthy person realizes too that while fellowship of members is an important part of church and religious life, it does not "in itself" establish a man's relationship to God.

A person must realize that for good mental health he must participate in the activities of his church in more than just a passive, spectator, receiving way. He can participate to help the church become an effective force for human betterment in the community and an institution from which its members may benefit.

FARM FACTS

FARMING — SOUTH OF THE BORDER. A ten-day trip through the heart of Mexico does not qualify one to speak as an expert on Mexican agriculture but it does make a vivid impression on the mind of one interested in people and farming. I have just returned from such a trip and want to share my impressions about our southern neighbors and friends with you.

Two things stand out in my mind about Mexican farming—its primitiveness and its dependence upon water. Mexico is still dependent upon the burro. There, the burro is man's best friend and agriculture literally moves on the back of that friendly animal. In rural Mexico the burro serves as the family car, especially to transport papa and the kids, even if mama walks. It is the farm truck to haul his hay, deliver his crops to market and do all the essentials performed in the U. S. A. by gas and electrical power. In the three thousand miles I traveled by train, bus and car in Mexico I never saw one piece of modern machinery, although I am sure that in some areas agriculture might be, and probably is, competitive with its American counterpart. South of Mexico City I passed through a productive agricultural area with excellent rice, sugar cane and cotton, but, man, burro and ox were the only visible source of power. Rice was being cradled by hand, threshed with a flail and hauled on the backs of burros. Primitive plows were being drawn by oxen. For the lack of fences, herds of cows and flocks of goats and sheep were being tended by men and boys. There has been little change in agricultural methods since biblical days. There is a tremendous waste of labor by our standards but with the lack of capital and jobs their primitive methods provide means of livelihood for a large part of their population. The drought in Mexico during the past season had been terrific. We saw thousands of acres of corn and beans, the Mexican staff of life, that won't make a bushel per acre. Normally poor pastures were even poorer than normal and farm experts were fearful of the future. Thousands of head of thin cattle are being forced on the market and live-stock men were worried about the affects upon the nearby American markets for low grade feeder cattle and the depletion of Mexican breeding herds—it seems to me to be an excellent outlet for surplus American feed grains. Mexico, like a great part of the Western United States, is already feeling the pinch of water shortage. In my short trip I saw many dry-irrigation ditches, silted-up reservoirs and abandoned farm homes. The fear of water shortage is already more acute for many people than the fear of atomic weapons.

Boaz Found Cambodians 'Simple, Delightful People'

TRADITION IN ART....Prof. William Boaz, art division, admires a Cambodian "Buddha cloth" which he brought back to Murray when he returned to the faculty this fall. Buddha cloths are hand-woven in Cambodia, each silk thread being dyed individually as it is loomed. They tell stories of Buddha and his life, and have much religious and legendary significance.

Prof. William G. Boaz, though not a new faculty member, certainly has acquired some new ideas since he was last on the MSC campus two and one-half years ago. Prof. Boaz has recently returned to Murray after a leave of absence spent in Cambodia participating in a project sponsored by the International Cooperation Administration.

The new elementary school program project in Cambodia was administered by the Unitarian Service Committee, Inc., a non-sectarian organization that aids underprivileged peoples.

Prof. Boaz was in charge of art instruction, which, because of its creative nature, is considered one of the starting points in introducing new ideas and ideas. He found that all forms of artistic expression in Cambodia reflected little of the native culture, as French cultural patterns had been taught when the country was a French colony.

Using the Western concept of the study of nature and environment to teach art, Prof. Boaz had them introduce Eastern mythology, folklore and religion to their art after learning the basic skills of expression. He was amazed at how little most of the students knew about their own country; field-trips to acquaint them, as well as Prof. Boaz, with pre-French Cambodian art were taken to familiarize students and teacher with Cambodia.

Prof. Boaz used mostly painting, drawing, and sculpture in his teaching program, and his students also painted murals for the school cafeteria and the auditorium, and painted the school.

Prof. Boaz found the Cambodians to be simple, delightful people, more concerned with the possibility of trouble in Thailand and Vietnam than with the Communists in neighboring Laos. Because of the dense border of jungle between Cambodia and Laos, they have little contact with that country, but they have had frequent contacts with Thailand and Vietnam, most of which were unpleasant.

In addition to the new ideas he brought back from Cambodia, Prof. Boaz also returned with a wife, the former Miss Angelina Kemper, who was also working for the Cooperative Administration in Cambodia.

Do Farmers Get $7 Billion in Subsidies?

By J. E. STANFORD

Frequently you'll see a published statement to the effect that "farmers get $7 billion in USDA money," which leads many urban people to think that farmers get one or more subsidy checks each month the year rolls around. Very often this misleading statement causes the reader to get only one-seventh of the story and the truth.

The plain truth is that the farmer gets only a fraction over $1 billion of the $7 billion that goes into this USDA budget. Many Kentuckians have never read or been told the real truth about this budget and go on believing the farmers of the nation are getting $7 billion yearly instead of one-seventh of that amount.

Under section V of the budget, such items as the Conservation Payments, Sugar Act Program, Agricultural Conservation, and the Feed Grain Program, totaling slightly over $1 billion, are the only direct benefits farmers receive of the entire budget.

The remaining $6 billion benefits all U. S. citizens directly or indirectly. These include such items as flood control, meat inspection, national forests, a special foreign program, and payments to state for such things as lunch programs and experiment stations. Item III of the so-called farm budget includes loans to organizations who pay interest on money borrowed, therefore, is not an expense to the taxpayer as income to farmers.

Almost $3 billion of the so-called farmers' budget goes to the Commodity Credit Corporation. This includes money for such things as famine relief, milk for the special milk program, and feed for migratory water fowl.

Over $1.5 billion was spent on the Foreign Assistance Program. Of this amount $1,040,319,000 was used for Public Law 480. The story herein recited is not an attempt to justify more subsidies nor is it an effort to compare farming to other subsidized businesses. Our main objective is to give facts in defense of the farmer who so often is charged with getting seven times more subsidy money than he ever gets or dreamed of getting. The facts of this matter should be carried to the Farm-City Week meetings to be held in Kentucky in November. It should be very helpful to better relations between urban and rural people.

A mentally healthy person realizes that he must not use God or his church simply to justify what he wants to do. This often happens with emotionally-disturbed people.

An extreme example would be a man who believes that God wants him to destroy certain individuals whom he personally dislikes. Similarly, groups sometimes may persecute other groups in the name of their church or their God.

A mentally healthy person realizes too that while fellowship of members is an important part of church and religious life, it does not "in itself" establish a man's relationship to God.

A person must realize that for good mental health he must participate in the activities of his church in more than just a passive, spectator, receiving way. He can participate to help the church become an effective force for human betterment in the community and an institution from which its members may benefit.

FARM FACTS

FARMING — SOUTH OF THE BORDER. A ten-day trip through the heart of Mexico does not qualify one to speak as an expert on Mexican agriculture but it does make a vivid impression on the mind of one interested in people and farming. I have just returned from such a trip and want to share my impressions about our southern neighbors and friends with you.

Two things stand out in my mind about Mexican farming—its primitiveness and its dependence upon water. Mexico is still dependent upon the burro. There, the burro is man's best friend and agriculture literally moves on the back of that friendly animal. In rural Mexico the burro serves as the family car, especially to transport papa and the kids, even if mama walks. It is the farm truck to haul his hay, deliver his crops to market and do all the essentials performed in the U. S. A. by gas and electrical power. In the three thousand miles I traveled by train, bus and car in Mexico I never saw one piece of modern machinery, although I am sure that in some areas agriculture might be, and probably is, competitive with its American

counterpart. South of Mexico City I passed through a productive agricultural area with excellent rice, sugar cane and cotton, but, man, burro and ox were the only visible source of power. Rice was being cradled by hand, threshed with a flail and hauled on the backs of burros. Primitive plows were being drawn by oxen. For the lack of fences, herds of cows and flocks of goats and sheep were being tended by men and boys. There has been little change in agricultural methods since biblical days. There is a tremendous waste of labor by our standards but, with the lack of capital and jobs their primitive methods provide means of livelihood for a large part of their population. The drought in Mexico during the past season had been terrific. We saw thousands of acres of corn and beans, the Mexican staff of life, that won't make a bushel per acre. Normally poor pastures were even poorer than normal and farm experts were fearful of the future. Thousands of head of thin cattle are being forced on the market and live-stock men were worried about the affects upon the nearby American markets for low grade feeder cattle and the depletion of Mexican breeding herds—it seems to me to be an excellent outlet for surplus American feed grains.

Mexico, like a great part of the Western United States, is already feeling the pinch of water shortage. In my short trip I saw many dry irrigation ditches, silted-up reservoirs and abandoned farm homes. The fear of water shortage is already more acute for many people than the fear of atomic weapons.

Boaz Found Cambodians 'Simple, Delightful People'

TRADITION IN ART....Prof. William Boaz, art division, admires a Cambodian "Buddha cloth" which he brought back to Murray when he returned to the faculty this fall. Buddha cloths are hand-woven in Cambodia, each silk thread being dyed individually as it is loomed. They tell stories of Buddha and his life, and have much religious and legendary significance.

Prof. William G. Boaz, though not a new faculty member, certainly has acquired some new ideas since he was last on the MSC campus two and one-half years ago. Prof. Boaz has recently returned to Murray after a leave of absence spent in Cambodia participating in a project sponsored by the International Cooperation Administration.

The new elementary school program project in Cambodia was administered by the Unitarian Service Committee, Inc., a non-sectarian organization that aids underprivileged peoples.

Prof. Boaz was in charge of art instruction, which, because of its creative nature, is considered one of the starting points in introducing new ideas and ideas. He found that all forms of artistic expression in Cambodia reflected little of the native culture, as French cultural patterns had been taught when the country was a French colony.

Using the Western concept of the study of nature and environment to teach art, Prof. Boaz had them introduce Eastern mythology, folklore and religion to their art after learning the basic skills of expression. He was amazed at how little most of the students knew about their own country; field-trips to acquaint them, as well as Prof. Boaz, with pre-French Cambodian art were taken to familiarize students and teacher with Cambodia.

Prof. Boaz used mostly painting, drawing, and sculpture in his teaching program, and his students also painted murals for the school cafeteria and the auditorium, and painted the school.

Prof. Boaz found the Cambodians to be simple, delightful people, more concerned with the possibility of trouble in Thailand and Vietnam than with the Communists in neighboring Laos. Because of the dense border of jungle between Cambodia and Laos, they have little contact with that country, but they have had frequent contacts with Thailand and Vietnam, most of which were unpleasant.

In addition to the new ideas he brought back from Cambodia, Prof. Boaz also returned with a wife, the former Miss Angelina Kemper, who was also working for the Cooperative Administration in Cambodia.

Do Farmers Get $7 Billion in Subsidies?

By J. E. STANFORD

Frequently you'll see a published statement to the effect that "farmers get $7 billion in USDA money," which leads many urban people to think that farmers get one or more subsidy checks each month the year rolls around. Very often this misleading statement causes the reader to get only one-seventh of the story and the truth.

The plain truth, is that the farmer gets only a fraction over $1 billion of the $7 billion that goes into this USDA budget. Many Kentuckians have never read or been told the real truth about this budget and go on believing the farmers of the nation are getting $7 billion yearly instead of one-seventh of that amount.

Under section V of the budget, such items as the Conservation Payments, Sugar Act Program, Agricultural Conservation, and the Feed Grain Program, totaling slightly over $1 billion, are the only direct benefit farmers receive of the entire budget.

The remaining $6 billion benefits all U. S. citizens directly or indirectly. These include such items as flood control, meat inspection, national forests, a special foreign program, and payments to state for such things as lunch programs and experiment stations. Item III of the so-called farm budget includes loans to organizations who pay interest on money borrowed, therefore is not an expense to the taxpayer as income to farmers.

Almost $3 billion of the so-called farmers budget goes to the Commodity Credit Corporation. This includes money for such things as famine relief, milk for the special milk program, and feed for migratory water fowl. Over $1.5 billion was spent on the Foreign Assistance Program. Of this amount $1,040,319,000 was used for Public Law 480. The story herein recited is not an attempt to justify more subsidies nor is it an effort to compare farming to other subsidized businesses. Our main objective is to give facts in defense of the farmer who so often is charged with getting seven times more subsidy money than he ever got or dreamed of getting. The facts of this matter should be carried to the Farm-City Week meetings to be held in Kentucky in November. It should be very helpful to better relations between urban and rural people.

A New JOHN CREASEY Thriller

A ROCKET FOR ROLLISON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED? Kate Lawson waited apprehensively at a London airport to meet her fiance, Maurice Holmes. They had been apart two years, while he was on business in the U. S. After so long a time did Maurice still have the same affection for her? Straining her eyes for a sight of Maurice as the first passengers disembarked from the plane, Kate was bowled over by a vicious attack of a vicious dog. Sprawled on the ground, she was conscious of being hit on the side of her head, and then blackness came over her.

When she regained consciousness, a young doctor, Mike Kennedy, was attending her. Looking around, she found no sign of him. After a search proved he was nowhere at the airport, even though he had been listed as a passenger on the plane, Kennedy drove Kate to her home, where she found her desk ransacked and Maurice's letters stolen.

Kennedy came to her aid by introducing a man she recognized as the Hon. Richard Rollison, the aristocratic private detective known as "the Wolf," who now believes that Kate fell victim to a conspiracy to prevent her meeting Maurice.

CHAPTER 7

WHEN Richard Rollison dialed his Creston Terrace flat, the bell had hardly started to ring before he was answered by his man, Jolly: "This is the Honorable Richard Rollison's residence."

"Hello, Jolly," Rollison said briskly. "This job isn't at all uninteresting, and it will stop me from getting rusty if nothing else. There's an outside chance that it might be wise to watch Miss Lawson's apartment. Will you telephone Eb-but, get a couple of his chaps laid on, and then come here until they can take over?"

"Immediately, sir," answered Jolly. "Is there any special thing to look out for?"

"I'd just like to be sure she doesn't have any visitors," Rollison said.

He rang off on Jolly's assurance, hesitated, then walked to the spot from which he could see along Gillyway Street. He stood staring after it for fully five minutes, not sure why he felt on edge, yet anxious to make sure that the girl was not left unprotected.

Then he saw two men walk along the street and turn into Number 17, or a house very close by. One of them went into the house; the other stayed outside.

Rollison turned into the street, waiting on the other side of the road. He saw the man by the porch staring towards him. Number 17 was between two street lamps and there was very little light. Rollison passed the man, and out of the corner of his eyes saw that the other was wearing a hat pulled low over his forehead so that it was difficult to see his face.

Rollison strode on, as if he had not noticed the man, and drew level with him. He could imagine the other's relief, could imagine the very moment when he relaxed. And in that moment Rollison spun around and darted at the road.

He needed several seconds start—and his tactics? He started the other that he won them. A. ne reached the pavement: the man was turning and leaping desperately for the door. He reached it, and pushed it open as Rollison caught up with him in a flying tackle.

The man crashed against the door. Rollison knocked his knee painfully, winced, but did not let it deter him. He went over his victim, lifted the man's head in his hands, and banged it sharply on the stone step. He felt the body go limp. "That should put you to sleep for twenty minutes or so," he said, "but I'd better make sure who you are."

He held his hands into the other's pockets, and took out the usual odds and ends — and the unusual 32 automatic pistol from the hip pocket.

He took out a wallet and some letters, thrust these into his own pocket, then straightened up. He dragged the other inside, closed the door, and went to the foot of the stairs. He heard no sound.

He hurried up the stairs, watching every landing and every shadow cautiously, knowing that the man who had come in here might have heard the struggle downstairs and be waiting ready to pounce or shoot — or might be in Kate Lawson's flat.

KATE thought, in a strangely calm mood, that Dr. Kennedy had really given her a drug which worked wonders. Five minutes after taking it and a glass of hot milk, her anxiety seemed to ease.

She was yawning when she got into bed. She turned off the light, sure that she would be asleep in five minutes. There was no sound, and it was very dark up here.

She heard a sound outside. It did not worry her, only puzzled her.

She heard the sound again. What was it?

She stared at the door. There was no sound for at least a minute, and she began to think that she had been imagining things when she heard an unmistakable creak not far from the door.

She thought: Perhaps it's Maurice. She lay still, her heart beating faster. If it were Maurice, why had he come in so furtively? Who else had a key?

Then she heard the handle of the door turn. Any other night, she would have been terrified, but that induced calm was upon her. She eased herself up on one elbow, and called clearly. Maurice is that you?

"Yes," she heard, vaguely. "Yes, Kate."

She stretched herself up in bed, quite convinced up her own mind that it was Maurice not knowing what to say or now to greet him. There was no sense in the way she was behaving, but there seemed nothing she could do about it. She waited for the door to open.

When it did, the room beyond was in darkness of course. She could just make out the shape of a man's head and shoulders as she stretched out to switch on the bedside light.

"Don't put on a light!" he called in a whisper.

Maurice seldom whispered, but there seemed nothing remarkable about the furtiveness now. He had missed her—perhaps actually avoided her—at the airport, and now he had crept up here late at night. Could he have been here before, for those letters? What could he possibly want from them?

The door opened wider, and she whispered back: "No one will see us. Why mustn't we have the light?"

"Just a minute," he urged. "She felt quite sure of one thing; he was scared. She heard his heavy, agitated breathing. He was moving so slowly, too, as if he feared that there was someone else in the room—or else, someone on his heels. Could that be it? Was he being followed?"

He was at the foot of the bed when she realized for the first time that it wasn't Maurice. This man wasn't tall enough.

All the false calm vanished. She opened her mouth to scream, but her voice died. She raised her hands in front of her, and the man flung himself forward.

But for one thing, she would have had no chance at all to save herself. The one thing was the narrow gap between the bed and the wall: the man could not be as swift as he wanted to. Kate struck out at him, and her nails scratched his hand.

She tried to snatch up the lamp from the dressing table, but it slipped and fell. She thrust her hands out again to fend him off, and felt the nails of her right hand scratch his face; then suddenly he was upon her, pushing her back on to the bed, hands groping for her throat.

She screamed.

His hands fastened round her throat with awful tightness, and she knew that he was going to kill her.
